RECOLLECTIONS OF OCTOBER, 1860

J. B. WELLS.

- Now turns the fragrant pawpaw ripe, When touched by frosts of early fall; Now comes the flutring, darting snipe, To charm the active huntsmen all.
- The grass in meadow and in marsh, Is sere and brown and coarse and high. The wind is low and a ightly harsh, As moans the trees with somber sigh.
- The whistling quail go forth to feed In early morn at dawn of day; They feast upon the scattered seed And scratch amongst the clover bay.
- The woodcock waits about the marsh, To seize a worm to dine upon. The lazy mule receives the lash, As to the plow he hurries on.
- The possum likes to linger near, Where fragrent pawpaws lying are; The timid, slender, agile deer Can sniff their fragrance from afar,
- The fox squirrel with haughty miem Is quick to learn where beech nuts lay: he striped chipmunk may be seen, To fill his jaws and haste away.
- The mallard duck, that annual bird,
- Draws nigh to pond or running brook, His muffled quack can now be heard, While on his guard with sharp outlook. The large wild pigeons come like clouds, Which now and then obscure the sun; They light upon the trees in crowds, Within the range of sportman's gun.
- T'was fun to roam the forests then, With gun in hand and eager dog. To steal upon the turkey hen. And shoot the pheasant on the log.
- Such were the sports of boyhood days,
- Before the civil war begun; Butinow they sport in other ways. And much more harmful—two to one.

Remarkable Revival.

The most remarkable revival ever held in Kentucky is that which closed at Hildreth's Chapel, Nicholas county. recently, and which was conducted by Rev. Hall Pollitt. This minister exerted the most peculiar influence over his bearers.

Some of them would go into costasy and carry on in the most exuberant manner, while others fell prostrate at the preacher's feet and laid there for six or seven hours at a time, or just as long as Rev. Pollitt would remain with them. While these Christians or converts would be lying upon the others at the meetings no one would dare molest them, and men and women laid in a row at Pollitt's feet nearly all day.

The meetings lasted two weeks, and there between seventy-five and one hundred conversions and sanctifications. It is said that Rev. Politt has the same effect on congregations wherever be goes. His sermons are remarkable for their length, sometimes consuming almost the whole day.
